HAD NEVE. SEEN MUCH OF THE ANARCTIC

Until just a little more than a year ago, more than three-fourths of the Anarctic had never been seen by human eyes. Now, Navy photographers have taken pictures of one-third of this unknown area.

This frontier was penetrated by a handful of pilots and air crewmen in four aircraft who in one month explored more of the Anarctic than all previous expeditions combined.

Carver-Price School News

Hello Readers!
This week marks the end of the first six weeks. Report cards are anxious to receive. This period has been much harder for us, as we are looking forward for a Honor Roll list.

The first basketball game of the year ended in victory for us over Gibson, of Bedford, with a 38-18 score. James Gafford was high scorer with 17 points. Congratulations Coach Thomas and Varsity. We knew you could do it.

The second game of the season, held Thursday night, December 6, against Motom High of Farmville, ended in a victory for our "Jayhawks" with a score of 32 to 24. Peggy was high scorer with 14 points. The Varsity lost by a score of 34, having to play off the tie, 32 - 32. We outplayed Motom throughout the game, with a half-time score of 15 - 11. Outstanding players for the Panthers were: Raymond Lewing, James Gafford, Willie Bruce and Isaac Trent.

The next game will be Wednesday night, December 12, at 7:30 P. M. against Campbell County High School. The "Jayvees" will play the preliminaries. We plan to win over them.

"Family Night," held last Friday night, was very well attended by parents and students. Parents were able to talk with teachers and see what was done by their children during the first hour of the evening. A special program was held in the auditorium during the second hour in which students and teachers presented demonstrations and outlined work being conducted in the various classrooms and departments. Superintendent J. A. Burke was in attendance. Mrs. Mozella J. Supervisor, and Principal R. Patrick spoke to the patrons and students on their responsibilities and objectives in the educational program here at Carver. Parents were urged to visit the school more often and support activities being carried on. The committee for planning "Family Night" was: Mrs. Gaynelle Lee, chairman, with Mrs. T. W. Hamlet, and Miss Mimi Johnson.

Student Council officers and their sponsor, Miss E. M. Betts, attended the training meeting held at Booker T. Washington High School, Staunton, Virginia, on Friday, December 7, from 9:30 A. M. to 1:30 P. M. Fourth District group III associations were in attendance, and a very informative meeting was reported. Students attending were: Celestine Chambers, Dianne Tibbs, Helen Preston, Sarah Lipford, and Raymond Turner. Celestine Chambers was elected the vice-president of the fourth district.

Friday evening, December 14, 1956, at 8:00 P. M., the Senior Class presents its three one - act plays. We urge you to attend a s this is interesting, good entertainment. Admission is 25c and 40c. Mrs. H. P. James is director.

We close with this thought for the week:
"I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!"

AN ERROR

San Diego, Cal.- During his "welcome" talk to 20 new arrivals at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Sgt. Henry D. Patterson was interrupted by a constantly waving hand. Forced to acknowledge the persistant recruit, Patterson was surprised to learn that 18 of the 20 recruits to whom he had been talking were all prospective sailors. They had boarded the wrong bus at the airport.

AFFECT OF FEDERAL ROAD PROGRAM ON VIRGINIA TRAFFIC PATTERNS

How will the new federal interstate and defense highway program affect the urban areas of Virginia and their future traffic patterns?

Because of the limited experience this state has had with controlled-access highways, Highway engineers don't by any means have all the answers. Yet from experience gained since completion of the Shirley Highway (Route 350) in the Washington area, and from observations in other states, some facts are evident.

Since the new Federal act requires rights of way ranging from 200 to 300-feet for controlled access roads, by-passes of present business areas will be necessary.

"Except for about three miles of the Shirley, annexed by the city of Alexandria, rights of way of sufficient width do not exist within the corporate limits of our cities to permit construction of the interstate roads to the new standards," said W. Frank Smith, urban engineer for the State Highway Department.

This is especially important, he noted because 53 towns and cities in the state are affected. Of this 1,012 miles in the state's interstate road network, 127 miles are in urban areas of more than 3,500 population and 21 miles are in towns of less than 3,500 . . approximately 13 per cent of the total mileage.

"These roads have a high priority for construction," he stated.

Experience in other states has shown, Smith said, that by-passes, properly located, stimulate instead of retard the growth of business. When much of the "disinterested" through traffic, including trucks, is removed from congested streets in towns and cities, he said, local trade increased.

"In states that have been building controlled-access highways for some years, special studies have shown that overall business conditions were not affected adversely after by-passes were built," Smith said.

He emphasized that although the Federal program is for 13 years, the highways built will be designed to serve traffic for possibly a half-century. In view of this fact, he added, it is essential that the locations selected for the interstate routes also must be considered from a local economic standpoint.

In this connection, he noted that the Federal act requires that "local consideration with the needs of interstate commerce."

Consultants engaged by the Highway Department are now making a study of proposed general locations for Virginia's interstate routes. Their recommendations, which will be studied by Highway engineers and used as the basis for a report to the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, are expected to be delivered to the Department later this month.

The president of the United States Chamber of Commerce has called for a resumption of trade in non-strategic items between this country and Communist China.

VIRGINIA BEEF SALES SUMMARIES GIVEN

A record high number of cattle went to market this year through Virginia's organized feeder calf and yearling steer sales.

Virginia farmers secured $2,508,704 for the 27,279 steers and heifers consigned at the feeder calf sales, and $2,082,438 for the 15,612 head at the yearling steer sales.

Average price cwt. was down a little from the 1955 series. . $19.96 at the feeder calf sales as compared to $20.81 the year before; and $18.04 at the yearling steer sales as compared with $18.69 the year before.

Forty-one per cent of the animals consigned at the feeder calf sales graded fancy and choice as compared to 36 per cent in 1955. At the yearling steer sales, 17 per cent were fancy and choice, as compared with 20 per cent in 1955.

Top average price at any one feeder calf sale was $22.37, paid at Orange. Top average price at any one yearling steer sale was $19.75, paid at Winchester.

In 1955, a total of 12,371 head were sold at the yearling steer sales, and 25,784 head at the feeder calf sales.

Health and Beauty

There is a new theory that if a baby is started early on solid foods, he will be eating eggs, soup, mashed banana, custard pudding, and mashed crisp bacon by nine weeks.

This same theory says that by using a six-hour feeding schedule, the baby will soon be eating three meals a day. This would be a great help to the mother—as any mother who has ever worked on the 10-2-4 schedule will be happy to tell you. From a study of 600 babies fed this way, it is believed that they grow up with fewer eating problems.

Cereal feeding is started in most hospitals. Strained meats are begun at 14 days, strained fruits a few days later. Orange juice, eggs, soup, and other foods added at weekly intervals, under this new feeding theory.

Doctors agree that environment influences neurotic tendencies among children more than heredity does.

An extensive study of more than six hundred children found that early family influences were of great importance in development of neurotic tendencies.

Every mother and father has a duty to read at least two authorities on child training. A person is never so smart that he or she can know more about a subject than a doctor who has made a life study of children and their problems. Early training — and this includes the first two years — is very important. Parents should understand that without the knowledge of speech to make themselves understood, children cry or whine to let you know what they want. This is the only way they have as yet.

The great danger is letting this practice continue after the child has the power of speech and can tell his parents, nurse or friends what he wants them to know.

There are two schools of thought on spanking a child. Some children can be reasoned with as sure as they are capable of understanding what you are saying to them. Some children are too strong - willed for their own good and may need a spanking now and then. Even then it should be done in a calm manner and after explaining to the child why it is happening to him, and that it is for his own good. In time he will understand.
